POPPY DAY IN BETHEL MAY 25

Poppy Day will be observed in Bethel and throughout the nation on May 25, the Saturday before Memorial Day, Mrs. Iola Forbes, President of Geo. A. Mundt Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary, announced today. On that day all Americans will be asked to wear memorial poppies in tribute to the World War dead and to aid the living victims of the war.

The little red memorial flowers will be distributed here by women and girls of the G. A. Mundt Unit, under the direction of Mrs. Pat O'Brien, chairman of the Poppy Day committee. All contributions received for the poppies will go to Legion and Auxiliary welfare work for the disabled veterans, their families and the families of the dead.

"We feel that Poppy Day will have increased meaning to America this year," said Mrs. Forbes, "because renewed warfare in Europe has renewed the memory of those boys of ours who gave their lives 'over there' twenty-two years ago. It is for them that we put on the poppy each year, to show that we still remember and honor their sacrifices. It is the flower which grew where they fell and which now blooms on the coats of Americans who appreciate their service."

"Events of the past year have shown us clearly that to be secure the United States must have men ready and able to defend the country, willing to give their lives in its defense, if necessary. We can be thankful today that we had such men twenty-two years ago. From them we can draw inspiration for the patriotic service necessary to maintain our freedom and democracy against today's dangers. Wearing their flower over our hearts means that within our hearts their love of America still lives."

HIGH WATER

Several days of fairly steady rain last week, with about the last of the snow melting in the woods, brought the rivers in this section to the highest point of the season. Roads were under water in several places Friday and Saturday, and traffic was halted between Hallowell and Rumford Point from Friday to Sunday.

Thomas LaRue has been confined to his home by illness.

I. O. O. F. DISTRICT MEETING HERE TOMORROW NIGHT

Mount Abram Lodge, No. 31, I. O. O. F., will be host at a district meeting on Friday evening of this week. It is expected that about a hundred will be present, representing lodges in West Paris, South Paris, Norway and North Waterford.

The evening's events will begin with a supper served by members of Sunset Rebekah Lodge at 6:45. This will be followed at 7:30 by a parade led by Bethel Band, and the meeting will be called to order at 8 o'clock. The degree team of West Paris Lodge will confer the second degree on five candidates.

SOUTH PARIS 9—GOULD 8

A set-back in their first game of the season was the result of an exciting and interesting ball game at South Paris Wednesday. The locals led until late in the game and seemingly had the game tucked away when Paris came to life and crashed through.

Jenks on the mound for Gould went the entire distance and had the misfortune to lose a well-pitched game. Many of the South Paris hits were of the fluke variety landing just over the infield. Tucker, Wentzel, and Clough hit well for the losers with Clough getting the only extra base hit of the game. Munce and Shaw were the leading sticklers for Paris.

The game, as a whole, showed that the locals with a mile more polish will be able to give the opponents a good game. The field yesterday was very much faster than the infielders were accustomed to, and balls hopped by them that they would ordinarily gather in.

SUMNER SEWALL TELLS C. of C. OF GOVERNMENT

A group of over 25 members of the Bethel Chamber of Commerce and guests listened to a very enlightening talk on the subject of Government by Sumner Sewall of Bath following their regular meeting Tuesday evening at the American Legion rooms. Mr. Sewall is well qualified to discuss this subject, being president of the Maine Senate, a prominent business man, and one of the candidates for the Republican nomination as governor in next month's primary election.

The discourse and subsequent discussion however were entirely non-political, although he stated at the beginning that some people were of the opinion that the subjects of government and politics were inseparable. His explanations of the processes of legislation and the methods of operation of various state departments led his listeners to agree with some of his theories regarding the possibility of economy in management of the state's business.

It is Mr. Sewall's belief that the conduct of state affairs may be and should be similar to the operation of any business of like size, and he contended that any successful business would require the elimination of wasteful methods and inefficient employees. By doing this and making possible the recognition and advancement of worthy members of the personnel he feels that the tax dollar will go much farther for the good of the people.

Mr. Sewall stated "that in his opinion the state should encourage its present industries, and new business which is adapted to the use of local materials will be attracted by the prosperity of the present industrial operations, rather than the too frequent story of manufacturers coming here attracted by the bait of tax concessions or freedom from labor trouble only to move on in a short time."

The meeting was preceded by a supper served by the ladies of the Legion Auxiliary.

APPOINT NEW CLUB AGENT FOR OXFORD COUNTY

The appointment of Joseph L. Harrington as county club agent for Oxford County was announced this week by Arthur L. Deering, director of the Maine Extension Service.

Mr. Harrington is a member of the senior class at the University of Maine. His home is in Patten. His major field of study has been agronomy.

A member of the varsity football squad for two years, Harrington has also served as chancellor of Alpha Zeta fraternity and as a proctor in the freshman dormitories. His appointment is effective July 1.

Mr. Harrington succeeds Miss Doris Rosen, county club agent in Oxford County since 1934.

County club agents supervise 4-H Club activities, which are sponsored by the county farm bureau, University of Maine Extension Service, and the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Mrs. William L. Caldwell and son of Oxford and Mrs. Agnes French of Norway were dinner guests of Mrs. Herbert Tift Tuesday.

TWO MEN DROWNED IN SWIFT DIAMOND

At this writing the bodies of Leslie Turner of Wentworth Location, N. H., and Howard M. Hart of Wilson's Mills have not been recovered. The men were drowned in the Swift Diamond River Friday when the boat in which they were running the Falls capsized. Four others of the party managed to reach the shore. The survivors were Charles Turner, Walter Littlehale, Everett Worster and a nephew of Mr. Turner. Mr. Turner was an experienced river driver. This was Mr. Hart's first experience on a drive. Everything possible is being done to recover the bodies.

TUCKER ELECTED CAPTAIN OF 1940 BASEBALL TEAM

At a meeting of the members of the baseball squad held recently, Carl Tucker received the honor of the captaincy by a large majority.

Tucker has been an outstanding man on the baseball team since his freshman year. He has been among the batting leaders in the league, and also covers an outfield position perfectly. This year, in addition to his outfield duties, he is helping with the pitching.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

WATCH THOSE SUMMER SHADOWS

See that the shadows are properly illuminated in your summer snapshots of people. Here, a bright, sunlit sidewalk reflects light up under the hat brim, and helps give shadow detail.

AS SUMMER approaches, outdoor lighting on sunny days becomes more and more contrasty. The sunshine is brighter, the blue sky does not reflect as much light as a gray winter sky—and in consequence, shadows tend to appear stronger and blacker in your pictures.

Of course, in some pictures you want strong black shadows to create a desired pictorial effect. But in most pictures—and especially snapshots of people—you want detail in all the features. Certainly you do not desire deep shadows around the eyes, nose, and lower lip—for these make a person almost unrecognizable.

To avoid such shadows, or get detail in them, there are several methods. The simplest is to place your subject in open shade—not under trees—facing the clear sky.
Then give about double the average "sunshine" exposure—say 1/25 second at f/8 lens opening, on average speed film on a bright sunny day.

A second method is to use reflectors, or place your subject where there are natural reflecting objects.
For example, in the picture above,
a light-colored concrete sidewalk reflects quite a bit of light up under the subject's hat brim.

Excellent reflectors can be made readily. A white card, or one covered with crumpled tinfoil, serves nicely for small areas. A white sheet also will do.

Backlighting is another device—really a variation of the "open shade" method. The subject is placed with his back to the sun, so that his face is in shadow, and ex-posure is about the same as for an "open shade" shot. In the picture above, if the subject faced to the left, you would have backlighting.
The dark background would then be even more important—for in the print the subject's face should appear lighter than the background.

In taking backlit pictures, do not let sunshine strike the lens.
Use a lens hood, or have someone shade the lens without obstructing its view.

Watch the shadows when you are taking pictures this summer. See that they are properly illuminated—make sure the contrast isn't too great—and you'll get a better effect in your prints.

JACKSON-SILVER UNIT No. 68

An unusually good crowd enjoyed the delicious pot luck supper served by Mildred Cummings and Edith Littlefield preceding the meeting
May 3.

Roll call found 18 members and two visitors present, Mrs. Blaquiere of the Norway Unit and Mrs.
Thurlow.

The Unit voted to accept the invitation from the Daughters of Union Veterans of West Paris to participate in their Memorial Day exercises. The Post has asked the Daughters to come here and join with them in their services. The Bryant Pond Grange will be asked to serve the dinner as last year.

The poppy seals were given out and they are taking well with the public. Cella Lamb reported children in the West Paris grammar and intermediate rooms are making poppy posters for which they will be given prizes.

President Anne Kimball appointed a nominating committee of three to line up the officers for the new year.

Eight members of the Unit and as many from the Post attended the Tri-County Council meeting in Rumford May 2. Among the speakers were Comrade Sumner Sewall of Bath and State Commander
"Lew" Fortier of Augusta. Department President Gladys Jameson of Bangor stated that Maine is the first Department in the Eastern Division to reach its National Membership quota. The present total is 5,013.

Jackson Silver Unit was presented a National Citation won in membership last fall. Seventeen Units were present at the Auxiliary's business meeting, including several officials. Next and last Council meeting before Convention will be held in Strong May 25.

'NOSELESS' ROCKET ... Set-back fuselage is not the only distinction of this new Navy plane called Skyrocket, for it's said to be faster than any fighting plane in world, with top of 450 miles an hour, and can climb almost vertically. It's 28 feet long, has 42-foot wing spread.

SEES TAX PERIL ... American Farm Bureau Federation opposes proposed federal chain store death sentence tax because it would jeopardize an arm of distribution farmers urgently need, Edward A. Stories of Indian Wars Told by Old Documents Substantial crops of old documents have been gleaned by the custodian of Fort Laramie National monument from filing boxes that have lain in the old store at that Wyoming army post since the days before its abandonment early in 1890. The papers cast interesting light upon the financial fortunes of the men garrisoned there during the Indian wars.

Applications for many orders include names of persons who later became well known citizens in Wyoming. One soldier signed his application "Happy Anderson" and another rates mention because he sent out the largest order of all, for $150, mailed to a savings bank. The capitalist belonged to Company F, Seventh Infantry.

Subscriptions to various newspapers and magazines for which money orders were issued included leading papers of New York and Chicago, and most of the long-established magazine publishers of the day. Mail-order houses were popular. Some of them are still in existence today, as are also some of the big department stores in New York, Philadelphia and St. Louis that found patronage in far-distant Fort Laramie.

Internal Combustion Idea Traced to 15th Century

The idea of the automobile dates back to the Fifteenth century. The scientists in Leonardo da Vinci's time did not visualize the streamlined vehicle of today, but they toyed with the idea of mixing air and fuel, igniting the mixture in an engine and using the power for driving machinery.

There were all kinds of ancient ideas about the internal combustion engine, says the American Petroleum Institute. In the Seventeenth century a Dutch scientist, Christian Huyghens, proposed to manufacture a "gunpowder engine." It was not so good, but it renewed interest in the possibilities of the internal combustion engine.

In the Eighteenth century people were agog over an engine which would run on coal gas. It was built by John Barber, an Englishman. Designs were improved, development was expedited and the internal combustion engine manufacturing industry really was born. There were "double-acting" engines which used the crankshaft, connecting rods and piston assembly about the same as they are used in the modern internal combustion engine.

The German engine designer Otto adapted the principles of the first four-stroke-cycle theory advanced by the French scientist Beau de Rochas. It became the forerunner of today's four-cycle automotive gasoline engine.

CHAPTER XVIII

Norwood went the round of the stables. There were only four of them. They had already received orders from Sergeant Stoddart. Norwood repeated the instructions: "There are thieves in the neighborhood, and there is a rumor that there might be a raid on the camp. It isn't likely to be anything serious, but look out for it. Don't kill anyone if you can help it. In any event, you are to challenge three times and then fire your first shot in the air. I am expecting visitors, who may perhaps approach stealthily, because their business is secret. So look out for them, and be careful not to mistake them for thieves." He returned to his tent, where O'Leary sat holding an empty glass with futile optimism.

"Get out of here, now, and make yourself useful."

"Me—useful?"

"Yes. Those Brahmins with whom I talked down near the waterfall this morning."

"Yeah, they slipped one over on you. I heard all about it."

"Hold your tongue then. I expect they'll be coming to talk to me about my visiting the mine."

"You need a nurse," O'Leary answered. "You'd never get your brass hat one of these days if it weren't for your Uncle Moses. Them there Brahmins are as likely to come and talk to you tonight as I am to kiss the Queen of England. They figure they've bought you. And they figure they can prove it on you, if you don't come across. They'll sit quiet, them Brahmins will. What you're up against is what I warned you. That Bengali doctor was too scared for his own skin to be talking me lies. Set your lamp to one side of the tent and eat your supper in shadow, if you can't eat in the dark. Watch out. They don't chuck no more cobras at you. They've gone. They've outmanned. And there's Gulbaz in back of this so watch out Gulbaz and a woman."

Norwood stared at him. "Woman?" he said. "What do you mean?"

"You told me to mind my own business. This ain't my business."

"Talk!"

"How about our whiskey?"

"Do you wish to be sat in the cook-fire?"

"You'd spoil your supper! But I've been thinking. If you want to know what I was thinking, I'll tell you. Herring was or three injustices you've done to me, and I'm of a forgiving disposition, there's only one man in Kadur, by my reckoning, who'd pay money to see you dead and buried."

"You may name him."

"Name him yourself. Him and you was thumbing a guitar and singing to the same girl. Let's suppose he knows, for instance, that the priests slipped you a bribe. And let's suppose he thinks you're honest. Let's suppose he thinks you'll earn the bribe and fix it so the priests win their case. And him heir to the throne. And him and you mashing the same golden-haired beauty. He'd be as officer-headed as you are if he didn't hit quick—and below the belt. He'll hit hard! What's to stop him from spiking the Brahmins' case by getting them blamed for having murdered you? Answer that one! Why not lay off the girl? If I was you, I'd—"

"Don't let me have to caution you too often, O'Leary. What I expect from you is information. I do my own thinking. If I should ever need advice from you I'll tell you."

"Tah! never as use advising anybody about no woman," said O'Leary. "I know symptoms when I see 'em. All right, munda's the word, I ain't saying nothin'."

"Get out of here."

After supper, Norwood wrote another letter to Lynn Harding. He didn't tear up that one. He addressed it in care of Mrs. Harding at the guesthouse, and then stuck it into his tunic pocket. He was still undecided. Determined, but not ready with his plan. O'Leary came and warned him again about sitting too near the lamp, so he went outside the tent and sat in the shadow cast by the rising full moon. A sentry challenged.

"Careful!" Norwood shouted. "Don't shoot unless you have to. And don't shoot to kill!"

A bullet whizzed past him—then another. They came from two directions.

"Sentries, hold your fire!" he shouted.

Stoddart came charging up, breathing hard, fastening his tunic and belt as he ran.

"All present, sir! All ready!"

"Very well, Stoddart. Keep your hair on. Post two men to guard my tent. Send two to the horse-line and the remainder to guard the store tent. Thieves—I think."

Norwood walked ahead into the darkness, shadowed by O'Leary.

"Now what?" asked O'Leary.

"For the love o'—"

"Fetch a lantern on a long stick. Hurry."

Norwood stood in deep black shadow waiting for him. O'Leary ran up with a lantern at the end of a very long stick—at least ten feet long.

"Give that to me. Next shot they fire, raise a yell that I'm hit."

"Okay. I get you. You're a credit to your Uncle Moses."

Norwood held the pole extended toward his left to its limit. He walked forward. The lantern danced as if it were in someone's hand. A bullet spat out of the darkness. Norwood felt. O'Leary shouted at the top of his lungs:

"Stoddart! Hi there, Stoddart! They've shot the Captain! He's dead! They hit him through the heart!"

Stoddart and four men came burying Norwood whispered:

"Pick me up. Carry me into the tent feet first."

"Mournful and solemn," O'Leary added.

"Lay me on the cot in full lamplight. Spread a sheet over me," said Norwood.

"He's as dead as trouble," said O'Leary.

So they carried Norwood to the cot and there he lay, in lamplight, while Stoddart slightly overdid the business of taking over command. O'Leary scouted. At the end of ten minutes, O'Leary returned to the tent.

"That's done it. They've gone. crunched among the bushes like a pig with a panther after him. Nobody fired a shot. There wasn't a sound. They've gone for good. All Kadur will know that you're dead, within twenty minutes. They may even tell 'em the news at the palace, though I doubt that. Palaces get the news late, after other folks have had time to lay their bets."

Norwood sat up. He stared at O'Leary. O'Leary held his tongue. He watched, waited. Norwood didn't speak for sixty seconds. Then:

"O'Leary, there is just one chance in fifty that Prince Rundhia is on the wall, by that kiosk, where he was last night."

It almost seemed as if the night knew that Norwood had made up his mind. He was riding a fresh horse, but he didn't hurry. He was followed by a mounted sentry, and by O'Leary on another horse. The horses, the sentry and O'Leary behaved like a snake's tail. They followed the head without asking questions. Norwood gave no orders. He didn't tell O'Leary what he intended to do. But as they came near the palace garden wall, he reduced the speed a little and O'Leary, without needing to be told to do it, went scouting ahead.

O'Leary, on the other side, made plenty of noise. He made a signal, pointing with his right arm, as he broke from shadow into moonlight. There was nothing mysterious about his signal; he simply pointed to the swinging tangle of a baobab. It overhung the wall in search of earth in which to take root. It looked like a python, swaying slightly in the faint evening breeze.

That made it very easy for Norwood. He drew rein beneath the baobab tangle. He didn't even have to stand in the saddle to reach it. The sentry rode forward and took the reins. Norwood climbed the tangle, hand over hand, swung himself on to the wall, and walked forward. As he emerged out of the shadow of the overhanging trees, he saw O'Leary looking backward toward him. Norwood extended both arms and moved them slightly up and down. That was an order to O'Leary to patrol the road. Norwood wanted no witnesses. He walked forward along the wall, toward the kiosk, where Rundhia stood talking to Lynn.

Lynn saw him first. She looked startled and Rundhia faced about—for a moment speechless.

"You, is it?" he said. "What the devil do you mean, climbing walls at this hour of the night?"

"I came looking for you. No, it isn't my ghost. They missed me. Did you hear the shooting? Aren't you rather a duffer at choosing marksmen?"

"I don't know and I don't care what you mean by that remark," said Rundhia. "Get off the wall."

"When I'm ready, Rundhia, what have you been saying about me?"

"You flatter yourself. I don't care to talk about you."

"What did you say to the Resident? He mentioned that you had called to see him."

"Did he? Well, my conversation with the Resident was confidential."

"So was mine, Rundhia. Say to me what you said to him."

"You may go to the devil," Rundhia glanced backward at Lynn, then sneered at Norwood: "People who pocket bribes are not entitled to—"

It wasn't exactly a haymaker. It was a right-handed wallop without any ringside pedigree, but with all the strength, contempt and anger of a clean-living man behind it, that landed on Rundhia's chin like a gun going off. It brought a laugh from O'Leary, who couldn't possibly have seen it. Rundhia reeled backward toward the garden as if pole-axed, out for the count. He did a forward knife-bend on the edge of the wall, and toppled backward into the darkness. The crash of shrubbery announced that he had fallen soft. Norwood glanced at Lynn then: "Just a minute, please."

He ran down the steps to take a look at Rundhia and dragged him out of the shrubbery on to the path. He made a rough estimate that no bones were broken and let him lie there. He returned up the steps and confronted Lynn.

"I suppose you've killed him."

"Oh, no."

They could see each other almost as distinctly as in full daylight. Lynn's hair was a mass of spun gold. Her emotion, revealed on her face, her parted lips, her startled, questioning, proud eyes drove out of Norwood's mind the few terse phrases that he had prepared. He said suddenly, because he couldn't think of anything else to say:

"What are you doing in that make-up?"

"You should have hit me," Lynn answered. "That was a cowardly blow. You gave him no warning. Are you sure you haven't killed him?"

"I'm afraid he'll live. Is it true, Miss Harding, that you told Rundhia about a packet of diamonds that you saw drop from my pocket this morning?"

"Yes."

Norwood stared at her. She didn't flinch. She continued speaking after a moment:

"That is why I wrote inviting you to come and see me. I wanted to tell you what I had done, and to explain how I came to do it, and to apologize."

"I didn't believe you had said it," Norwood answered. "I came to—"

Lynn interrupted: "I did say it. It was my fault. I wish you had hit me, instead of Rundhia. I would have preferred that to the humiliation of being despised and of being—"

Rundhia moaned on the path in the darkness below.

"Captain Norwood, I must go and help Rundhia. Will you please let me pass?"

"No," said Norwood. "I will shout for servants presently, to carry him to bed."

"His nose may be bleeding!"

"Serve him right. I came to tell you."

"I can't bear to be told. I know. You're too late, Captain Norwood. I have heard that what I said has got you into serious trouble. I am ashamed of it, if that is what you want to know. If you had read my—"

Norwood interrupted her. "What do you mean by too late?"

"If you had answered my letter—"

Lynn's lips were trembling. She was choking. "Rundhia—"

She couldn't continue. She felt like crying. Suddenly she controlled herself and looked straight in his eyes:

"Captain Norwood. If you please, I must go and look after Rundhia. Will you let me get by?"

Norwood didn't move. "What did you say in your letter?" he asked.

"If you despised me too much to read it, why ask that now? I know you got the letter. It was sent by one of the Maharajah's messengers, who came back and said he had given it to you. He said you tore it up; he saw you do it."

"Did the messenger tell you that?"

"He told Rundhia."

"Oh," said Norwood.

O'Leary whistled, in the distance, somewhere between the kiosk and the palace front gate. Rundhia groaned again. By the noise, he appeared to be helping himself to his feet by holding on to the shrubbery. Norwood called to him:

"Are you all right, Rundhia?"

"None of your business!" said Rundhia's voice from the darkness.

"I'm going to have you arrested," Rundhia's footsteps went staggering away in the direction of the palace.

Norwood faced Lynn again: "Sorry. I'm in a hurry. Would you like me to see you as far as the palace steps?"

"Oh, no. Thank you."

"Well, look here: I wrote you a letter, just in case I didn't find you. I brought it with me. Will you take it now and read it later? It's quite important. Perhaps you'll give me an answer next time we meet."

"If we do meet," Lynn answered. "Why should we? Good-by."

"So long. Don't forget my letter."

Parents

When you and your family start on a train, motor, or bus trip, be sure you have a box of Mothers' Milk. Travel sickness inevitably occurs at an inconvenient time, but when prepared with Mothers' Milk—yours will be a happy journey. Children are not accustomed to the constant motion and swaying of trains, motor and buses, and often become faint and nauseated after riding but a short way. Relieve this travel sickness with a timely dose of Mothers' Milk, the remedy successfully used for more than a third of a century, and recommended by physicians, nurses and well known travelers throughout the world. At drug stores.

The further information you write to me, the better. Address: CO. 1, Ltd., 470 Lafayette St., New York.

Costume for Fair

Simplicity in dress is the keynote of the World's Fair of 1940 in New York. A simple coat of light weight is part of the wardrobe which Mary Lewis, a director of the World's Fashion exhibit at the World's Fair suggests out of town visitors bring to the Fair. She also advises plenty of simple dresses of the spectator sport type.

Servicers Sunday morning at 10:45.

"Adam and fallen man" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon that will be read in all churches of Christ. Scientist, throughout the world, on Sunday, May 12.

The Golden Text is: "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit" (John 3: 6).

The citations from the Bible include the following passages: "So God created man in his own image. In the image of God created he him, male and female created he them. But there went up a mist from the earth, and watered the whole face of the ground. And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul" (Gen. 1: 27 Genesis 2: 6-7).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy.

Testimonial meetings at 7:30 p. m. on the second Wednesday of each month until May.

ALTON BARTLETT FUNERAL

One of the largest funerals ever held in this section of the county was that of Alton F. Bartlett at his late home in Hanover on Sunday, May 1, at 2 p. m. The spacious home was filled to capacity with relatives, friends, and business associates paying their last tribute to a highly respected citizen and neighbor, one to whom you could turn for advice or assistance. The room literally banked with beautiful flowers silently spoke the esteem in which the deceased was held.

Much sympathy is felt for his brother Charles and Miss Leona Fuller who have faithfully and tenderly cared for him during his years of failing health.

Rev. M. A. Gordon of Bethel spoke words of comfort, while the Bethel Lodge, F. and A. M., who attended in a body conducted the committal services at the family lot in Hanover. Members of the organization acted as bearers.
